I am about 2/3rds of the way through the book, The Omnivore's Dilemma by Michael Pollan. A friend recommended it one night over dinner. I have not eaten a dinner without increased consciousness since! I am curious who else has/is reading the book and what has impacted the reader, what changes s/he has made in their lives.

What hits me most about this book is how, even though I considered myself a healthy eater, there is so much really bad stuff in food. The entire connection to money and making the most money and selling out is

I haven't read the book, but the issue of local sustainability is important.

Perhaps you or others might be interested in getting together informally or "webally" (my word!), to talk and share what we've been doing as large/small growers of food.

I'm sure there are many people here in Tamworth would would love to begin growing their own food but don't know where to begin.

This photograph was taken at the Burgess Mill Digester House in January 1945. The man on the right is Roger Dignard (spelling of name may be incorrect).

Ronald A. Couture // Apr 5, 2007 at 6:44 pm

This picture was taken at the Burgess first Digester House . We knew it as the Old Chip Loft back in our days. There was still one digester used for Black Liquor storage and that was #19. The Chip Loft was right above the Digesters, there was a gate that the operator opened and the chips would flow by gravity into the Digester. Same theory applied with the Blow Valves which would open directly into what we knew as the Blow Pits.

Stumbled upon this photo. I am quite certain that the man on the right is my uncle; and the name is spelled correctly.
